

Contents

List of Figures	ix
List of Tables	xi
List of Photographs	xiii
Acknowledgments	xv
List of Abbreviations	xvii
Preface	xix

GEOFFREY JONES

Introduction: “The Path of Civilization is Paved with Tin Cans”: The Political Economy of the Global Tin Industry	1
--	----------

MATS INGULSTAD, ANDREW PERCHARD, AND ESPEN STORLI

1 Not by Tin Alone: The Polymetallic Content of Primary Tin Production and Cornwall’s Role in the International Mining Industry	22
ROGER BURT AND NORIKAZU KUDO
2 Bankers, Entrepreneurs, and Bolivian Tin in the International Economy, 1900–1932	46
OSCAR GRANADOS
3 Summer’s Food for Winter’s Tables: Tin Consumption in the Americas	74
JOEL WOLFE
4 Banging the Tin Drum: The United States and the Quest for Strategic Self-Sufficiency in Tin, 1840–1945	89
MATS INGULSTAD
5 Tin and the German War Economy: Scrap Drives, Blockade Running, and War Looting	123
JONAS SCHERNER

viii Contents

6	Tin, Tin in the Congo: From Imperial Asset to Conflict Mineral ALANNA O'MALLEY	142
7	The Trouble with Tin: Governments and Businesses in Decolonizing Malaya NICHOLAS J. WHITE	169
8	The Birth of the World's Largest Tin Merchant: Philipp Brothers, Bolivian Tin and American Stockpiles ESPEN STORLI	202
9	Increasing Developing Countries' Gains from Tin Mining: The Boom Years from the 1960s to 1985 JOHN T. THOBURN	221
10	"The Strategic Wolf Hidden beneath the Clothing of the Economic Sheep": Tin and the Strategizing of Raw Materials ANDREW PERCHARD	240
	List of Contributors	271
	Index	275